Two Views of Human Behavior

Traditional view (neoclassical economics):
• Well-informed
• Stable preferences
• Perfect self-control
• Good at processing information
• Consistently makes decisions to maximize well-being

Behavioral view (behavioral economics):
• Limited cognitive capacity
• Mental shortcuts
• Choice overload
• Imperfect self-control
• Procrastination
• Small factors can influence big decisions
What is Behavioral Economics?

- Behavioral economics is a mix of psychology and economics that challenges the “traditional” or neoclassical economics view of human behavior.
- Traditional economics models presume individuals are calculated and unemotional decision makers who always use all available information to make the best decisions and maximize their well-being.
- Many public policies and programs are designed based on a traditional economic model of human behavior.
- Behavioral economics provides a more realistic representation of human behavior.
What is Behavioral Economics?

- Experimental evidence shows that humans often act in ways that deviate from what would be predicted by neoclassical economics, and, moreover, that these deviations are systematic and predictable.

- Program and policy designers can leverage these insights about human behavior to improve program performance.
Illustrative Behavioral Economics Principles

- People can only pay attention to and understand a limited amount of information at a given time – limited cognition, limited attention

- People give more weight to the present than the future – psychological distance, present bias, procrastination

- Small factors can have an outsized impact – channel factors, hassle factors

- People are influenced by how they see themselves and others – identity, social influence

- People are more motivated by losses than by gains – loss aversion
Psychology of Scarcity

• Research into the psychology of scarcity shows that the pressure of negotiating life under conditions of poverty can place a particularly high toll on cognitive resources, as people often need to make many trade-offs to manage their lives with limited financial resources.
Why BIAS?

BIAS seeks to answer the question:

How can behavioral economics apply to human services policies and programs?

The purpose of the BIAS project is to apply insights from behavioral economics to issues related to ACF programs.

The ultimate goal is to learn how insights and tools from behavioral science can be used to improve the well-being of low-income and vulnerable children, adults, and families.

Texas Child Support - DEFINE

- Texas Office of the Attorney General Child Support Division wanted to increase the number of incarcerated noncustodial parents who apply for child support order modifications
  - Incarcerated parents have limited ability to pay their child support orders
  - One study found that the average incarcerated obligor parent leaves prison with $20,000 in arrears
  - Significant arrears can pose a serious barrier to re-entry into society and regular employment and ability to support child after release
  - Incarcerated parents in Texas may apply to reduce their monthly child support payment, but only 31% of inmates who were sent a letter informing them of their ability to apply for an order modification completed the request for modification

Dear Incarcerated Parent,

Your child support obligation (how much you are ordered to pay by the court) does not automatically stop or change when you become incarcerated. While you are in prison, your unpaid child support, along with interest continues to add up.

Due to the change in your circumstances (incarceration), you may be eligible for a modification of your child support payment. This means that the court may lower your monthly child support and/or medical support obligation.

If you are interested in having your child support possibly lowered, please completely fill out the attached application. Upon receipt of your application, our office will contact the other parent (custodial parent) on your child support case to notify them of this process and to ask them for information regarding the case. The court will make a final decision regarding a modification based on all available evidence.

Sincerely,

Oscar Esquivel

You Could Lower Your Child Support Payments!

We will send you important information soon on how you could lower your child support payments if your income has gone down due to incarceration.

For example, a parent with a monthly order of $800 could reduce the amount of child support owed by $3,600 in just one year.

In a few weeks we will send you everything you need to complete and submit an application.

Other parents have had courts lower their child support by $200 to $500 per month.

Completing the application is easy. You can do it during a brief meeting with the law librarian.

Your child support debt gets bigger every month you don’t take action!

A parent with an order of $350 per month could reduce his or her child support debt by $4,200 in one year. Many other parents in TDCJ have already had their child support reduced.

A few weeks ago, we sent you a letter letting you know that you might be eligible to have your child support payments lowered if your income has gone down due to incarceration. We haven’t received your application, but you still have time to send it to us.

Make an appointment with the law librarian today, and complete the blue application we sent you. As soon as we receive your completed application, we’ll start reviewing your case to see if your support can be lowered.

Act now! You could lower your child support payments!
• 1,904 eligible incarcerated parents were randomly assigned to receive standard materials or revised BIAS materials
• Materials were mailed in May – July 2013 and responses were tracked through December 2013
• The BIAS intervention increased the percent of incarcerated noncustodial parents who sent in a completed modification application by 11 percentage points
  • 39% of the BIAS program group and 28% of the control group returned completed applications
  • This is a 40 percent increase in return of completed applications
• BIAS program group members returned their applications more quickly than the control group
• The cost of BIAS materials was approximately $2/person more than the cost of standard materials
